Poetry.

Be a Woman.

Oft I've heard a gentle mother,
As the twilight hours began,
Pleading with a son on duty,
Urging him to be a man.
Cut unto her blue-eyed daughter,
Though with love's words quite as ready
Points she out the other duty—
"Strive, my dear, to be a lady"

What's a lady? Is it something
Made of hoops, and silks and airs;
Used to decorate the parlor,
Like the fancy rugs and chairs?
Is it one that wastes onnovels
Every feeling that is human?
If 'tis this to be a lady
'Tis not this to be a woman.

Mother, then, unto your daughter
Speak of something higher far,
Than to be mere fashion's lady—
Woman is the brighter star.
If ye, in your strong affection,
Urge your son to be a true man,
Urge your daughter no less strongly
To arise and be a woman.

Yes, a woman! brightest model
Of that high and perfect beauty,
Where the mind, and soul and body
Blend to work out life's great duty.
Be a woman! naught is higher
On the gilded list of fame;
On the catalogue of virture
There's no brighter, holier name.

Be a woman! on duty!
Raise the world from all that's low,
Place high in the social heavey
Virtue's fair and radiant bow;
Lend thy influence to each effort
That shall our nature human;
Be not fashion's gilded lady—
Be a brave, whole-souled, true woman.

Selected Story.

Malvina.

Young Tom Collins, law-student, had just come into a strange inheritance. He sat solitary in his little boarding-house room, trying to realize it.

"If the poor child hadn't me," he said to himself, "it could go and apply for admission to some institution. If I hadn't it, I could; but the Lord! that is not the idea. I must decide what I am to do."

Tom had solemnly promised to care for the new born baby of his only sister, who had just died.

He tried to meditate, He had often before, during his life, made the same attempt, but had never to any extent succeeded. He did not seem like one born to take things into very serious consideration. But this case seemed to require it. No good joke came to the rescue. Tom really had never in his twenty-two years felt such an awful sense of gloom. His natural hilarity could only suggest to his mind the rather poor consolation that he "had at least over night to consider on the business."

Here Tom was interrupted by a knock on the door, an occurrence unusual euough in the little uper room where he had long since ceased regarding even the bell-pull as a resort in any extremity, so completly was he accustomed to be let alone.

Before Tom could respond to the knock it was followed by a cry of mingled entreaty and commaud, such as only hungry babies know how to emit.

"I've fetched the poor little dear around sir!" remarked a woman whose marvellous rotundity of person showed to fine advantage as she waved her screaming parcel as though it were incense wherewith to purify Tom's bachelor-room.

"Good Lord!" he ejaculated.

"You'd ought to git a cow," said nurse, still brandishing her charge. "There! there! there! It's got wind this minute, mixin milk. Have you found a nurse, sir? And baby wants clothes."

"It's got on too many clothes now," said Tom. "I think that's what it's crying about; see how red and hot it is!"

Poor inexperienced Tom! he had offended the woman—cast recklessly overboard his only anchor!

She dropped her shrieking charge upon Tom's bed, and started towards the door.

"Very wel, sir!" she said solemnly, "I see you know all about babies—I may go!"

"Oh! oh!" grasped Tom, "do not! In the name of mercy do not! It shall have clothes! Why do you say I want a nurse? Are you not one? I assure you I know nothing, absolutely nothing of babies!—I never to my knowledge touched one!"

Real despair is impressive. The woman was modified.

"I am sir," she said turning confidentially to Tom. "a 'monthly' I am willing to stay with you while I can. But, sir, one in my position is no dependence. My summons may come any day or hour. It's impossible to calculate. Day and night is all the same to me. There ain't on earth to me a thing so inscrutable as this impossibility of calculating when we shall be sent for. I'll work for you while I can, sir, but when my call comes, no earthly thing can keep me."

Tom took all these remarks in a religious point of view. From a person of Mrs. Primmins' robustness, they amazed him. He felt a vague fear lest, as he mentally expresed it, there might be "a bee in the old lady's bonnet."

"O! cheer up, cheer up, Auntie," said he you look hale and hearty.—You've overtired yourself with my poor sister. If you'll stay and take charge of that little thing for me, I'll risk your getting a summons."

"Yonr poor sister found great consolation in your promise for her child," remarked Mrs. Primmins pathetically. It's a desperate resort leaving a baby to a young man, but in her strait she was fain to catch at any straw."

"Can you," said Tom, looking gloomily at his now silent prize on the bed, "can you give me any advice? You couldn't have waited till to-morrow before bringing it, could you?" he added half reproachfully.

"Of course not," said Mrs. Primmins. "Well! you're no account! Now let me think."

"Do, in Heaven's name," ejaculated Tom.

Mrs. Primmins placed her arms akimbo.

Tom fervently prayed for light on the meditations.

"I have it," cried Mrs. Primmins; "Malviny's the very one!" "What a talent you have for managing, auntie dear!"

There was Tom his very self! He had hit on exactly the right compliment to pay the old nurse. He was actually floating through life on this instinct he had for saying the most pleasant thing to every body. Mrs. Primmins of all things desired the reputation of a maneuverer, as it was, of course, the one of all others that she did not deserve.

"Yes," she cried chucking, I can manage. Let me alone! And first thing in the morning, I'll go there with you. Now," said she, seizing her charge, who was beginning to squirm, "now I'll see what's to be got out of your landlady."

"To think of living always with death grinning one on the face like that," he muttered.

In the night Tom's dream of peace was again dispelled.

Another knock on his door.

"Am I under a ban? growled Tom; "what's the matter now?"

"I'm called," said the voice of Mrs. Primmins, "my summons has come!"

"Oh, the devil!" cried Tom, lost to all sense of the importance of conciliating the nurse. "Go to bed! Hold on till morning!"

In the morning Tom, who happy fellow! always slept soundest under a sense of depression, did not make his appearance until nine o'clock. He found that Mrs. Primmins had actually disappeared for parts unknown. In the arms of his hitherto stern landlady he found his charge nestling. A new light—that of love—was beaming in the solemn woman's eye,—that woman, thought Tom, who would see any one of her boarders starve and rot for ten cents a day saved! He looked at his little responsibility with a feeling of awe, almost a suspicion of witchcraft. It is customary to shake the head and wonder at the amazing Providence that sometimes removes a mother and throws a young infaut upon the charity of others! Why not also consider reverently the innate instinct of motherhood that rises in every female heart, at sight of a baby so bereaved!

"I have undertaken," said the landlady, giving Tom a smile such as he had never dreamed could rest on her features, "I have undertaken to go with you in search of Mrs. Primmins' niece, Malviny!"

Several hours later, Tom Collins sprang from a light wagon in which he had driven to the door of a pretty cottage.

"We will make one last effort by inquiring here," he said to the landlady, who held the baby.

With his usual impetuosity he pushed directly through into the little rear kitchen. There he forgot his errand. forgot everything except what he saw. A young girl, plump, neat and rosy, stood with round arms bared, before a table. She was assiduously occupied in caressing, with her white hands, little lumps of dough into shape. Then she placed them in rows in a big black pan. For a moment she did not see Tom. He unreasoning, impulsive fellow, forgot his errand—forgot everything, in short, and began envying those lumps of dough.—He felt instinctively that he, too, possessed a great faculty for being moulded by some such hands as those.

Suddenly she turned. Such a dimpling smile! such rosy embarresment! Tom, great black-haired, jetty-eye giant that he was, thought this little piump blonde an angel. Thought! why, he was sure of it!

After a while he came partially to his senses, and said. "I'm looking for one Malvina Baker."

"And that is me," said the rosy lips.

"Then I've brought you a baby;" he said abruptly.

A good deal of astonishment can be put into a pair of bright blue eyes without spoiling them—and so there was.—Fortunately, at this point the landlady appeared, and so, a moment later, did Malvina's mother, called up from the cellar by voices.

Negotiations were so completed.

Tom again in his little room, found it the loneliest, drearist place he had ever in his life looked upon.

A couple of days latter he concluded that it would be inhuman not to go and inquire after his little charge. In an incredibly short space of time he was seized with the same impression again. Then he went to take the baby, who had not yet learned that the moon was more distant than the door knob, a box of geographical blocks. Then he went to inquire if it needed pocket-money; and he told Malvina that he knew she was not kept awake nights by it, because her eyes were so bright.

This time Malvina's mother told Tom that of course they were very plain people, and no fit associates for a young "gent" like him, but that if he wished to stay, there was plenty strawberries and cream for tea.

Tom stayed, and after tea the moon came out. Oh! that wicked, shameless moon! Tom, by its light, told Malvina right out that her eyes were bluer than Heaven—her lips sweeter than roses—and all that!

When they parted Malvina went to her room and cried.

What could such a perfect king of a man mean by talking like that to her? Of course, he could not mean to marry a little school mistress only home on a vacation!

Tom acted queerly, too, when alone in his room. He took a pencil and paper, and figured and calculated. He made a list of all the little properties he possessed. He added them up and he added them down. Then he sat down a list of all the things he was accustomed to spend money upon that could be dispensed with. Then he brought out a book on economy, where it tells how a man can live cheaper with a frugal wife than he can alone. He was astonished to find that book so intesely interesting!

The next day Tom went again to see the baby. In fact, it had seemed to him as though the afternoon never would come. He had more waiting to do at the cottage, for Malvina's mother received him, and she did not appear. At last his impatience spurred him to ask.

"I don't want you to see her again, young man. I will be frank with you and tell the truth!

"Oh! Mrs. Barker," cried Tom.

"She's a simple child, sir, and is in danger not to understand that intentions from one like like you can mean nothing.

"Dear Mrs. Barker, you mistake me entirely. I must see her this once. I must indeed! If she sends me away, I will never come again."

Tom conqueered. When he explained to Malvina about his small income and consulted with her about its sufficiency, she told him that he ought to be ashamed indeed to waste such heaps of money on one. He should have sent half to the heathen.

Tom's income has thus far held out better than when he was single. Young men, try it!—Putnam's Monthly.

The Dot Upon the Sea

Ninety days ago a tiny boat, less than [illegible] feet in length, and carrying two men and a dog, left Liverpool, England, with the avowed purpose of crossing the Atlantic to New York. The bold and hazardous project was the subject of much amazement at the time, and about [illegible] o'clock yesterday afternoon the tiny craft was signalled approaching our harbor. At 6 o'clock the Collectors tug started down the harbor and met the venturesome marines at about 8 o'clock opposite the lower light and towed them to this city. The boat which has thus accomplished a voyage so hazardous and altogether novel is named the City of Ragusa, is twenty feet in length over all, six feet beam, and two feet eight inches in depth, drawing two feet of water; she is yawl-rigged, and spread seventy yards of convas, is fitted with a two bladded steam propeller, worked by hand, and her hulls, is of wood, the boards being only one half inch in thickness. In this miniature ship are all the arrangements for cooking &c., and the capacity for carrying provisions and water sufficient for the voyage which has just been so successfully terminated.

The crew consists of two men, John Charles Berkely, the commander, and Nicholas Primoraz. These are the two men who, actuated as the former says by a "mere whim," were induced to make this attempt which few could regard as anything but foolhardiness, after seeing the craft in which they launched their destinies and hung their lives by a mere thread. The former has followed the sea from boyhood, and has passed an eventful life. He saved two lives off the coast of Kent on the 28th of September, 1858, for which he was awarded a medal by the British Humane Society. He is an Irishman and has a home in Dublin. His companian is an Austrian. On Thursday, June 2, these daring spirits launched their frail bark, and, accompanied only by a dog, left Liverpool. In ten days they put into Queenstown, where they were obliged to remain four days in order to have some caulking done on their boat, which was leaking, and left there on the 16th, having on board one ton of ballast and five hundred weight of coals. They took the northerly route, the same as taken by the Cambria, the prevailing winds being westerly, and for the first thirty-five days they suffered a great deal, being kept wet through continually. They were also unable to cook in the first part of the voyage, and were compelled to eat their meat raw, which added to their discomfort, and helpted to discourage them. After being eighteen days out they became short of firewood, with no means of getting a suppby. At this time they very luckily picked up a barrel containing about four gallons of tar, which was a perfect godsend, they using the tar upon the decks and the barrel for fuel. On the Fourth of July they celebrated "the day of the great republic," drinking the health of President Grant in some [illegible] with which they were supplied. On the evening of that day there was a heavy gale, through which, however, they rode safely. On the 28th of August they lost one of their crew, the dog, who died from scurvy. They had a great deal of heavy weather, but the little bark bore herself nobly, and the men themselves, expressed surprise that she rode the heavy gales so staunchly. She was leaking all ths way, and the pumps, of which they have two, were kept at work constantly. In the severe gale of last Saturday she experienced the hardest time of the voyage, but suffered no disaster save the carrying away of the jigger boom. The largest numcer of miles made in one day was 153, which was made in the first part of the voyage, and the smallest eleven miles. The average speed was four knots an hour. A number of vessels were spoken on the voyage, among which were the bark Radcliffe, on the 28th of June, bound to Quebec; the ship Maxwell, August 9, and the homeward bound steamer Russia, August 14. From the first two of these they took in supplies of provisions and water. Two whales were very neighborly off Cape Clear, coming near enough to be touched by the hand, and giving the voyagers some alarm lest they should upset their frail ship. One of "Mother Cary's Chickens" attended them from the time they left Queenstown till they passed George's Bank. The men say that they had the most perfect confidence in the success of their enterprise, and in the roughest gale conld go to sleep with the greatest composure. Only the lateness of the season prevents them from returning home as they came. The original intention was to go direct to New York, but they concluded to put into this port, and will go from here to the former place, and will remain this side of the Atlantic till another summer. They were towed to Long Wharf by the tug, and there can be seen this smallest of all crafts that over traversed the broad Atlantic.—Boston Herald.

Mark Twain's New Map.

Mark Twain gives the Buffalo Express a burlesque upon the war-maps just now so common as a triumph of art, this map of the Buffalo humorist is unapproachable. It is entitled the "Fortification of Paris," but nobody would suspect that it had any relation to the French capital if not told of the fact. It exhibits the positions of St. Cloud, Vincenes, Verdun, Podunk, the Erie Canal, High bridge, Omaha and Jersey City. A peculiarity of the map is that the river Rhine runs directly into Paris, and that Jersey City lies in an elbow of the Seine, almost directly west of Vincennes. Prominence is given to a farmhouse and fence in the foreground of the map.

A curious and Bold Attempt to Extort money.

On Wednesday a rather a stylish dressed lady arrived in this city via the Grand River Valley Railroad, from Middleville, and after trying unsuccessfully to get accomodations that suited her at Sweet's Hotel and the Rathun House, was assigned a room at the National Hotel. Of her actions nothing particular was noticeable, except a slight flightness. A short time after the lady was shown to her room, a gentleman of commonplace exterior and modest address, requested the clerk to send his card to the lady's room. On the card was the name of Theodore Fraery. Some time elapsed, however, before the stranger gentleman was admitted, and it was noticeable that they were closeted together for a long time.

After tea the lady, Mrs. Vance (for such is her name), appeared on the street, 'unaccompained and alone," and meeting our well-known fellow citizen, Mr. S. H. Raymond, with whom, it seems, she was a little acquainted, accosted him, saying that she had a letter from her husband which she wanted him to read for her. Mr. Raymond offered to read it there but she said it was at the hotel, and he would oblige her by stepping up to her room, as the said letter contained matter of considerable importance. The gentleman readily assented, and accompained the lady. Upon entering the room, she quietly locked the door and placed the key in her pocket; she then quietly and complacently produced a six-shooter from another pocket. and pointing the same at the head of her victim in a manner more suggestive then pleasant, commanded him to sign a note payable to bearer for $1,000, or take the contents of a shooting iron. This was indeed a curious predicament; the situation of the Prince Imperial was not a comparison The pen lay there with the ink; and he demurred to the amount. After a little parleying the Joan of the National compromised by accepting $100. The paper was signed, and the gentleman left the room, bent on retribution. In the meantime the lady had taken the above note to the store of Messrs. Wilson & Harvey, where she wrote a letter, enclosing the promise to pay, and sealing the same, placed it in the Rathbun House letter box. This done, she returned to the National, and at 11:30 o'clock Sheriff Wyckoff, assisted by other officers, took her in charge, also the man Fraery as an accomplice.—Ex.

The Fate of a Prussian Spy in a Strasbourg Inn.

In an inn at Strasbourg, some Algerines, officers, sub officers, and French soldiers, were engaged in eating a comfortable dinner, the first for eight days.

A stranger entered and asked permission, to join them at the table. "Gentlemen," said he, "although I do not have the honor of being known to you, I am not a stranger to the [illegible] and family of the army. Capt. Brunet, of the Twenty-first line, is my best friend—almost my brother."

On account of Capt. Brunet, although no one present knew him, the stranger was allowed to take a seat. He had already eaten the cotelette and the ragout, and had commenced to chat with his companions, when his evil destiny brought into the room an officer of the Twenty-first.

"Ah!" said one to the stranger, "here is some one who will give you news of your friend."

"Lieutenant, we present to you an intimate friend of Capt. Brunet."

"What Brunet?"

"Of the Twenty-first."

"We have never had any Capt. Brunet during the ten years years I have been in it."

The intruder was visibly emparrassed. He stammered, and, in his confusion, betrayed a foreign accent.

Some Turcos took the lieutenant aside, and said:

"Are you sure Capt. Brunet is unknow in the Twenty-first?"

"I give you my word of honor!"

They were going to maky short wook of the spy, but his next neighbor, an officer of the tirailleurs, arrested them with a gesture and said:

"This gentleman is under my care. Dine at your ease, sir. Permit me to pass the cheese. Take some of these mirabelles."

The dinner was ended in silence. They went out. The officer took the arm of the spy, passed into the street, drew his revolver, and gravely, and without a word of remark, blew out his brains.

LUNCY.—An editor who was evidently insane, or had a strong and vivid imagination, recently got off the following appropriate item, if true:

I had a dream the other night'
When everything was still;
I dreamed each advertiser
Came up and paid his bill,
Each wore a look of honesty,
And smiles were round each eye,
As they handed out the stamps,
Saying. "How is thss for high?"

Jean Paul Richter says: "To insure modestly, I would advise the educating of the sexes together; for two boys will preserve twelve girls, or two girls twelve boys, innocent, amid winks, jokes and improprieties, merely by that instinctive sense which is the fore-runner of matured modesty. But I will guarantee nothing in a school where girls are alone together, and still less where boys are."

The Baron Von Moltke has a propensity for joking, and the following story is told of the lively old soldier by a German paper:—"Passing the frontier, Gen. Von Moltke observed a sign board with two arms, one marked a Paris the other a Berlin. He quietly changed the hands and the French soldiers, obeying the direction as they found it, have been hastening to Paris in the firm belief that they were advancing upon Berlin."

French Royalty

"Uneasy lies the head that wears the crowu," is the sentiment put into the mouth of Henry IV., proud Bolingbroke, who in his own career usurper, and in the murder of his prodecessor, helped to point the moral. The recent deposition of Napoleon III., and the vicissitudes, which, if not very instructive in this age of republicanism, are at least interesting. French history is specially replete with the misfortunes of royalty.

Louis Phillips, the royal predecessor of Louis Napoleon, began by fleeing for his life from the republicans of 89, and ended by fleeing before the republicans of 48. His early experience had taught him to put no faith in the tender mercies of an excited people, whose enthusiasm might easily run into fanaticism.

Charles X., a true bourbon of the direct line, who had learned no good nor forgotten any evil in the exile and adversity of his race, insisted on ruling as of Divine right. The ordonnances against the press and the advice of the Polignacs brought the revolution of 1830 and the three days of July upon Paris, and Charles X. was again an exile.

Napoleon, the man of destiny and favorite of fortune, could only be hurled from his pride of place by the combined power of all the kings. He abdicated once, broke faith, was again deposed, and ended his career at St. Helena. Prometheus bound to the rock, devoured by ceaseless regrets and memories.

Louis XVI. perished by the guillotine. A helpless, harmless man, upon whose unhappy head the sins of his ancestors were visited.

Louis XVII., a baby king, a mere legitimist phantom of royalty, died in the temple from privation and neglect.

Louis XV. le Desire, a minister of profligacy, the friend of Pompadour and Dubarry, the proprietor of Le Parc aux Cerfs, died a king and in his bed, but with none to close his eyes, for every attendant was away from the dying couch, either on pleasure or to pay court to the rising sun.

Henry IV., the great King, the Frenchman's royal ideal, lived a youth of courteous captivity, and after a manhood of war attained his crown by abjuring his religion, and died by the knife of Ravaillac in 1610.

Charles IX., the abettor of St. Bartholomew's Day massacre, died of disease of body and mind, brought on by remorse for the horrid crime.

Henry III., a profligate and unprincipled ruler, was assassinated by Jacques Clement, a Dominican monk, in 1958, and masses were offered in church for the assassin.

Henry II., a brave and able prince, to whom was owing the annexation of Metz, Verdun, and Toul, with the adjoining country, as the price of his alliance with Bradenburg (now Prussia) against Charles V. aud Austria, was killed by the stroke of a lance in the eye in 1559.

Francis I., the last of the kings of chivalry, fell before the astute policy and vast power of Charles V. [illegible] combinations of Spanish infantry and German Lanzknecht, with French generalship, the brilliant victors of Marigan were powerless. He was taken prisoner at Pavia, and confined at Madrid until conditions of peace were forced upon him so humiliating, that he refused to be bound by his own compact, and a terible war of extermination was waged, both countries wasting France with fire and sword until they laid down their arms from sheer exhaustion.

Charles VII., during whose reign Joan of Arc rescued France from the English, closed a not inglorious reign by falling into a melancholy; and starving himself to death.

Charles VI., during whose reign the desperate civil war of the Armagnacs and Burgundians raged, became insane, and was virtually a prisoner in the hands of either faction.

John, the prisoner of the Black Prince at the battle of Poictiers, 1356, and taken away to England, was not liberated for many years. These wars of dynasty led to frightful suffering in the people, amid which Charles the Dauphin, afterwards king, wandered up and down the country a homeless adventurer.

Louis IX., or St. Louis, famous for his piety and crusades against the Moslem, was made prisoner by the Egyptians. The same king, persisting in his conversion of the Moors, was carried off by plague at Tunis.

Charles the Fat, Louis IV., the debonnaire kings of the age, were alternately captives and conquers. In those outrageous days of fraud and violence, when every evil passion raged with impunity, the imprisonment or murder even of kings was a small matter, and it is scarcely worth while to enumerate the inglorious vissitudes of such a succession of weak tyrants and brutal marauders.

Census Taking Humors.

A short distance from the residence of the writer lives a well-to-do farmer, about sixty years old, who married his second wife eight years ago. A few weeks since the census taker called on this old farmer, whom we will call C——, and after some other questions, asked him:

"What is your wife's given name?"

As the narrator, who saw the circumstance, says, C—— looked up, then he looked down, then opened his eyes, apparently perfectly astonishep; finally his mouth opened aud he said:

"Well, I declare! I really don't know! I think it is Betsy Ann Philips, but I'll go round into the cow yard and ask her." And away he went.

At a further stage in the proceedings he said to the census marshal:

"There's a little gairl here, and she ain't worth a ha'porth here nor nowhere else; but I suppose you better take her name down."

The above is well authenticated and undoubtedly true.—J. F.

Here is a fifty year old jeu' desprit that is quite as good as new. A rich old gentleman by the name of Gould, married a girl not yet out of her teens. After wedding he wrote the following couplete to a friend, to inform him of the happy even:

"You see, my dear Doctor,
Though eighty years old,
A girl of nineteen,
Falls in love with old Gould!"
To which the doctor replied:
"A girl of nineteen
May love Gould, it is true,
But believe me dear sir,
It is Gold without "u!"

Deferred Items.

Some people of promise prove to be nothing else.

The individual who was hanging in suspense was a horse thief.

Reputation is what men and women think of us. Character is what God and Angels know of us.

An Irishman, eating his first green corn, handed the cob to the witer, and asked, "Will ye's please put some more banes upon me sthick?"

"Young men, do you believe in a future state?" "In course I duz; and what's more, I mean to enter it as soon as Betsy gets her things ready."

At a concert recently, at the conclusion of the song, "There's a good time coming," a farmer got up and exclaimed, "Mister, you could not tell us the date, could ye?"

"I don't wish to say anything against the individual in question," said a very polite gentleman, "but, would merely remark, in the language of the poet, that to him 'truth is stranger than fiction.'"

A gentleman had a iittle marble statuette of Cupid in the parlor of his country house—bow, arrow, wings and all complete. A visitor, indigenous to the region, looking pensively at the figure, asked the lady of the house, "if that was a statoo of her deceased infant."

A fellow who "knows about farming" thinks the reason why Adam and Eve had so much trouble in the garden was because they raised cain before they got able. However, it did not make so much difference, for they turned out well.

A "bottomless hole" has been found at the northern end of Blue Hill, Nevada. One explorer descended to the depth of 200 feet without finding evidence of its termination. The walls abound with stalactites resembling coral.

Tom, twitting Sam on the extraordinary size of his understandings, said to him: "You must take cold easily, Sam; I should think you would be sick all the time.' "How so?" asked Sam. "Why," replied Tom, "because there's so much of you on the greund."

A young woman who lately sued for breach of promise was offered two hundred dollars to settle. "Whai! she cried, "two hundred dollars for ruined hopes, a shattered mind, a blasted life and a bleeding heart? Two hundred dollars for all this! Never, never,? Make it three and it's a bargain."

There is a God! The herbs of the of the valley, the cedars of the mountain bless Him; the insect sports in His beams; the bird sings in the foliage; the thunder proclaims Him in the heavens; the ocean declares Him immensity;—man alone has said there is no God.—Chateaubriand.

[illegible] modesty, I would advise the educating of the sexes together; for two boys will preserve twelve girls, or two girls twelve boys, innocent, amid winks, jokes and improprieters, merely by that instinctive sense which is the forerunner of matured modesty. But I will gurantee nothing in a school where girls are alone together, and still less where boys are."

A story is told of the Rev. Dr. Alexander H. Vinton of Trinity Church, New, York., which inculcates a moral of general application. The doctor was a tobacco chewer, and, with a quid in his mouth, was giving a young lady of twelve some good advice about observing Lent. "Pshaw! don't preach self-denial to me, when you have your mouth full of nasty tobacco!" The reverend gentleman turned aside his head, removed the odious weed from his mouth, and has never since used it.

A Young fellow in Nashau, N. H., recently got angry with his sweetheart, and for revenge took her to ride and left her on the steps of a country hotel, several miles from home, to find her way back as best she could. The girl one evening afterward induced him to drive her to visit a sister, twenty-miles distant, and while he was out of the buggy endeavoring to decipher the name on a door-plate she drove off and left him to go home when he got ready. The fun cost him $20.

FEMALE DARING.—A war correspondent of an English journal gives some remarks of Von Goeben on incidents in the fight at Saarbruck. "The thing which struck me most in the whole of the fight," said the General, "was the deliberate heroism displayed by the Saarbruck women. They entered the lines, bullets and grape-shot flying fast and thick, in a cart dismounted, and carried the baskets and bottles, with which they intended to refresh the weary troops, right forward where they thought they might be wanted. If a ball or bullet struck the ground or an object close to them, they started, but immediately after walked on as if nothing had happened.

Indianapolis is infested with highway robbers, but a brave girl there recently outwitted one of them. She was returning home about dusk, alone, in a buggy. She drove along leisurely, her horse drooping his head in a contented way. All at once a man jumped out from a cornfield near by and took her horse by the head. She looked at him in surprise. "I would like to ride with you, miss," he said to her. "Most anybody would," she replied, surveying him steadily. Taking the presence of mind for consent, he dropped the bridle rein and took a step toward the carriage. That instant the brave girl touched her horse with the whip, giving the man a sharp cut across the face, and before he could recover himself, he was thrown down by the wheels of the buggy, which, with his intended victims, soon disappeared.

AN INDIGNANT BENZINIST.—An inebriate in New Orleans was found with his arms locked about a lamp-post, crying Police!" "What do you want?" demanded the watchman, hurrying up to the place. "Arrest this man," cried Mr. Somers. "Arrest him immediately; he's been pickin my pockets." "Why, that's a lamp-post." "What?" "That's a lamp-post you've got hold of." The benzinist straightened himself up with drunken gravity, and contemplated the post with ill-concealed disgust. Evidently no words could convey a correct appreciation of his feelings; and, turning to the police, he said—"Arrest him anyhow; I don't mind having my pocket picked; but, sir, no lamp-post shall make out it's a man in my presence with impunity."

GRUMBLING.

In every rural district may be found a set of farmers who are forever grumbling; ours is not free from this class. They murmur against the weather—it is either "hotter or colder," "wetter or drier" than ever before. Their crops always look poorly, Everything goes against them. They never make more than "half a crop." Their perpetual cry is, "Hard times."

Why is this? Are the times really so hard? We think not. Our experience is that men who attend promptly to business generally succeed well, and have no time in which to make complaints. We make times hard by our own conduct. God assists only such men as are inclined to help themselves. And those who are loudest in their complaints againt the times are those who will not work with a will, and practice self-denial.

A, plants his corn on neglected, impoverished land, and fails to give it that due care and attention it deserves. When harvest comes he finds but a small yield of grain. He raises an outcry, "times are so hard." He murmurs against Providence; although God did water his fields with copious showers, and cause the sun to shine on the standing corn. Is it not his fault that times are so hard with him? And yet this is but a fair statement of the case. Men waste their time in hunting, fishing, attending political meetings, coming to town, and loafing about the streets, and get most wonderously "blue" when harvest time comes.

A word of advice to these; go to work! Employ your time profitably, judiciously, and hard times will be driven away from your homes. Go to work in the right way, and our word for it, that Providence you malign will reward your efforts. Stay in town less—stay at home more. Drain your lands, fertilize them, and these cries of "running behind," and "hard times" will cease.

THE TRIBUNE AND GOV. HOLDEN.

We have been much surprised at the conduct of the New York Tribune, toward Governor HOLDEN, in regard to the Tourgee letter. We presume that no one, not blinded by party malice and hatred imagines that Governor HOLDEN deliberately added to the figures in the copy of Judge TOURGEE's letter, furnished him by [illegible] figures as they appear in the original letter are large enough. wihout the multiplication of ciphers, to convince any reasonable man of the inhuman outrages of the Ku Klux societies and to approve the course of Governor HOLDEN in their suppression. There was no motive then for him to "garble" a manuscript which was soon to appear in print. Our own idea is that the mistake in making thousands for hundreds was a very natural one committed by the Clerk of Senator ABBOTT in making copies of the letter. Two of these copies were made, one for Governor HOLDEN, and one for Mr. COBB of this district. The latter we have seen, and the figures "4000 or 5000" occur, instead of "400 or 500" just as in the published letter furnished the Tribune correspondent by the Governor. We understand that Mr. COBB has enclosed his copy of the letter to General ABBOTT, and we hope soon to see the error placed where it properly belongs; that is to the young man who copied the letters. And we hope too that the Tribune will cease its insinuations against Governor HOLDEN.

NEW MINISTER TO GREAT BRITIAN.

Hon. O P. MORTON, U. S. Senator from Indiana, has been appointed Minister at the Court of St. James. vice MOTLEY, recalled. Gov. Morton has for a long time been prominent in State and National politics, displaying great administrative capacity, sound judgement, acute understanding and unblemished patriotism. Diplomatic life is new to him, but his great powers of mind, and good judgement will successfully sustain him; and his high character will command the respect of foreign nations, as it has won the confidence of his own.

The apointment of Mr. MORTON has given decided satisfaction to all the friends of the Aministration.

"Of one blood God made all the nations of the earth," "All men are born free aud equal," are in themselves glorious truths. Slavery is wicked—contrary to Bible teachings—contrary to the instincts of humanity. God has set his cu rse upon it, and no nation can prosper that practises the accursed system. Beleiving this we read with pleasure the following from the New York Herald:

Captain General De Rodas has just promulgated an order setting free the children of all slaves captured since the year 1854 who have served an apprentiship of sixteen years. May not this be regarded as the entering wedge towards the practical abolition of slavery in Cuba by the Spaniards?

But this is not enough. There must come a full and comprehensive emancipation similar to that promulgated by LINCOLN in 1863.

EX-GOVERNOR PACKER.

This distinguished citizen of Pennsylvania died at his residence in Williamsport, Pa., on the 27th inst. He was elected a member of the house of Representatives in 1846, re-elected in 1847 and again in 1848. In 1857 he was elected Governor of his native state. In him Pennsylvania has lost a valuable public servant.

THE COMING ELECTIONS.

The Democratic papers of the country, jubilant over the North Carolina elections, predicted grand old victories for themselves in every State. But Republicans were taught a most useful lesson by their defeat. They learned that "bolting," bringing out improper men &c., must be discouraged, else disaster would befal them on every hand. We confess that we greatly feared after the returns from our State that like defeats would be sustained in other States. Now we have no such fears. Returns from Maine and Montana show largely increased Republican gains. The canvass in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and other states, is being conducted with indefatigable zeal, and indications are strong in favor of Republican victories. The position in those States is unlike that of ours in the late election, in that the local complication, unfortunate nominations, and petty bickerings because of individual preferences which brought defeat to us, do not exist; but the whole controversy turns upon the merits of President Grant's Administration. This fact is cheering. The figures are before the people, courting investigation. These show rigid economy—no unnecessary outlays—they show strictest honesty and faithfulness, and these figures cannot be contradicted by our opponents. They cannot and dare not deny the great success which has, so far, marked Grant's administration. The people are convinced of his honor and patriotism—they know his record as a soldier, and his worth as a Statesman—and they will sustain him. Ku Klux-ism is not rife in those States, as with us. Loyal men will not be frightened from the polls, but as freemen they will cast their ballots for true and brave men, that dare maintain the right. In the coming elections we feel that certain victory is ours, and we can but rejoice in the anticipation of a glorious triumph.

SALT A CURE FOR AGUE AND FEVER.

We don't like Quinine, and never have since we were made to swallow Quinine pills, and gauff Quinine draughts in our childhood days. Our readers know from experience its bad effects on the system—terrible headaches follow its use, causing temporary blindness and deafness, altogether, so disagreeable that the sufferer is tempted to believe the remedy worse than the disease.

Our physicians have told us that Quinine is the only remedy for chills—but is it true? Some people say that common Salt is both a preventive and cure. We clip the following from the Baltimore American of a recent date:

We stated a few days since, on the authority of a gentleman from the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where chills and fevers prevail so extensively in spring and autumn, that a glass of salt and water taken at daybreak three mornings in succession would cure the most inveterate case. This allusion to the virtue of salt has attracted considerable attention among the thousands of sufferers from this disease at present in Baltimore. The following communication reached us yesterday morning, sustaining the value of salt as a preventative as well as a remedy for the cure of the disease:

BALTIMORE, Sept., 27, 1770.

[illegible] Editors Baltimore American:

In your issue of yesterday I noticed with pleasure your reference to the efficacy of salt as a remedy for chills. During a recent trip through several of tho Western States I met a gentleman whe had used salt externally for years as a preventative with entire satisfaction. A physician of Pittsburg told him to wear some in his shoes, and he had his stockings prepared by dipping the bottoms in a strong brine and letting them dry. For ten years he escaped the chills, but tiring of the experiment and beleiving he was indulging a mere fancy, he discontinued the use of salt, but he contracted the disease again, and it continued with him until he resumed the practice of the previous ten years. He also stated that in one ague district through which he traveled he met with several members of a firm who had escaped the disease, and on inquiry he learned they had been in the habit of tasting salt as they dealt it out to their customers, This last confirms the statement of your friend of Cecil, and whether used as a remedy or preventive, it is certainly worthy of a full and fair trial.

Hoping that great good may result from the newly discovered virtues of this old household friend I remain yours.

J. R. C.

In addition to the above it gives statements to the same effect from a number of persons living in miasmatic countries. The remedy is a simple one, and our people can but give it a trial.

A NAME BY WHICH TO CALL MY HOSTS.

In the midst of hallelujahs over the August election our opposition friends are terribly exercised at the want of a name by which to designate their party. Is it a Democratic or a Conservative legislature? a Democratic or conservative party that claims the recent victory? Who shall decide this question? Will it be left to GRAHAM, VANCE, WARREN and SPEED, old HENRY CLAY Whigs, or to BRAGG, MANLY, REID and JARVIS old JACKSON Democrats, to christen the infant? We confess we are considerably amused at the dilemma of the managers in this mongrel association. Many of our acquaintances who innocently voted against the Republican ticket in North Carolina, at the last election are waiting in some doubt, to see whether they are "Democrats" or "Conservatives."

We own ourselves, to some anxiety upon the subject. Let us hear from you gentlemen. Be kind enough to tell us your name.

On the 11th of October elections will be held in Pennsylvania for Congressmen; in Ohio, Indiana and Iowa for Congressmen and State officers, except Governor; in Nebraska for Governor, State officers and Congressmen; and in West Virginia on the 27th of October for Governor, Congressmen and State officers. In most of these States elections will also take place for members of the Legislature, All the other States which have not voted will hold their elections in November-

The reign of terror continues in Northern Alabama. Disguised desperadoes go about committing outrages, the relation of which would make the blood run cold.

QUERY.

The Sentinel publishes a list of the members elect to the next General Assembly of North Carolina, and in it the word Conservative does not stand affixed to any member's name. What does it mean? Does the State organ of the opposition mean to say that those men elected as Conservatives, are no longer called Conservatives, but Democrats? We find but two words used—Democrat and Republican. To us it seems that some people have been most egregiously deceived. "Sing, brethren, Sing!"

Foreign War News.

From the papers of the 27th we learn that the German forces about Paris are estimated at 300,000. "Carrier pigeon" dispatches from Paris received at Lille, represent that the battle reported on Friday resulted in victory for the French who captured the redoubts of Moulin, Sague, Villesuif and Hautes Bruyeres. Other successes are reported through the same medium. Gen Ulrich, the French commander at Strasbourg, is said to have announced that he can hold out but a short time. Hamburg dispatch to-day states that a large breach has been made in the walls, and that the city can be taken at any moment, but the assault will cost the Germans 3,000 or 4,000 men A correspondent at Hamburg telegraphs that the Crown Prince, in a letter to the Princess, says that there would be no bombardment or assault on Paris, or much fighting. A Mayence correspondent says the French prisoners of war in Germany number about 140,000, and that they are compelled to work on the canals in Hanover. A French officer had been shot for attempting to escape-

From the papers of the 28th we learn that France has been reinforced by 80,000. The French garrison of Strasbourg has been removed to Rastadt. The Prussian cavalry about Strasbourg has also left for Paris. A Tours dispatch says the French Consul at Balse contradicts the reported surrender or Strasbourg. He says three tremendeous assaults were repulsed with heavy losses to the Prussians, when a truce to bury the dead was agreed to, which gave rise to the rumor of the surrender. The Prussians have captured Clermont and completely invested Soissons. The railway from Chalons to the German border has been relaid by the Prussians, and the works vigorously pushed toward Paris. The French made another sortie from Metz on the 27th inst., but were repulsed. They, however, removed their dead and wounded and a number of prisoners captured by them in the fight. Paris advices reported successes of the beseiged in various minor encounters about the city. The Prussians have evacuated Pithiviers, and left in the direction of Paris. An armistice has been agreed to at Mezirees, which will probably continue till Oct. 7. At Havre, a revolving electric light illumines the harbor at night, and the entrance is barred by enormous chains.

From the papers of the 29th we learn that M. Thiers. will offer the Czar important concession in the East, in considera tion of Russia's good offices. According to a Brussels dispatch, the Belgian Press denounces the "arogance of Prussiaan pretentions."

A Brussel dispatch says that Napoleon proposes to issue a manifesto in reply to the last proclamation of the Government at Tours. The authorship is ascribed to the Ex-Emperor's private secretary. Dispatches from Tours represent that addresses have been received from all parts of France announcing adherence to the proclamation of the Government. The Moniteur, now published at Tours, yes-[illegible] by the Provisional Government of Paris on the 20th inst., reaffirming that the policy of France is not to cede one inch of territory or one stone of a fortress.

The French report of the battle near Paris, on the 19th, represents that the Prussians were driveu back at the first attack of the French, and afterward reformed in the wood of Meudon, and compelled the French to retire under their fortifications. The Garde Mobile, in the official report, is said to have behaved well, but the breaking of a regiment of Zouaves is confirmed. Communication between Tours and Paris is still kept up by means of balloons. Prussian cavalry are at Meudon, and strong forces are also at Bougival, Reuil, Nanterree and Chatillon. A Tours dispatch, dated at noon yesterday, says that beyond skirmishing nothing important had occurred at Paris. A Saarbruken dispatch to the London Times says a large force composed chiefly of Bavarians, is marching to ward Lyons.

The garrison of Strasbourg are ignorant of the events that have transpired in France, and believe that an army is marching to their relief. The bombardment has not caused irreparable damage to the great cathedral, the astronomical clock of which is still going. The French Government denies that Marshal Bazaine has made proposals to surrender Metz.

From the papers of the 30th we learn that Strasbourg surrendered on Monday afternoon. A dispatch from King William to the Queen of Prussia announces the fall of Strasbourg on Tuesday afternoon. A Mundelsheim dispatch says that the conditions were signed at 2 A. M. yesterday, by which 451, officers and 17,000 men laid down their arms. There is great rejoicing throughout Germany. The Prussian movement on Orleans is said to have been suddenly arrested, the force of Prince Albert having begun to return to Paris in consequonce of a dispatch received by the Prince. The Prussians have evacuated Fontainebleau. The threatened bombardment of Mezieres has driven the inhabitants to seek refuge in Belgium. A London dispatch says the Prussian corvette Bertha was sunk recently in the Black Sea, in an engagement with three French men-of-war.

The story telegraphed from London, on Tuesday night, on the authority of the Times of that city. relating to the mission of M. Thiers to St. Petersburg, is unfounded. The reported French advantages of the 22d are looked upon in London with some suspicion, and as inventions of the Prussians. The stories of disturbances and insubordination in Paris are also attributed to the Prussians. A Paris letter of the 24th inst., received at Tours, says the population is unanimous for the defense of the city. It is proposed to destroy the notes on hand of the Bank of France, should the city fall. The city is to be lighted with petroleum, if it should be necessary to cut off the gas. Rochefort is using his great influence with the working men, and they are prepared to fight to the last. The Prussian reports of riots are pronounced false. The gun-boats guard the Seine on both sides of the city. The Bourse is almost abandoned and scarcely and operations take place. The Provincial correspondenz of Berlin says French efforts to convert defeat into the victory are vain and further carnage is impious.

From the papers of the 1st of Oct., we learn that a repulse of the Prussians is reported at Mantes. The King of Prussia reconnoitered the French position from St. Denis to Romainville on Thursday. The rivers are so low that the Prussians can wade across.

The documents discovered in the Tuileries on the flight of the Imperial family have just been published in the Journal Officiel of the Republic in [illegible]. M. Deviefne, the Judge of the Court de Cassation, has been dismissed for his connection with the Mlle. Bellanger scandal. The Duc de Morny is shown to have profited largely by the Mexican bond operations. They also show that the private life of the Emperor was such as the Opposition speakers and journals represented it to be, when permitted to utter anything relating to the Empire. Marshal Lebœuf, Napoleon's Chief of Staff, is reported to have sought death in the battles around Metz, displaying the most reckless "valor." He admits that France was unprepared, but he dared not tell the Emperor the state of the army.

The National Guards, now in Paris, are said to number 375,000, and the supplies are being rapidly consumed. It was reported at Evreux, on Saturday, that 4,000 Prussians had occupied Mantes. A Toul dispatch says cannonading has been heard, for three days, in the direction of Pont-a-Mousson. It was reported that Gen. Bourbaki had made a successful sortie from Metz, inflicting heavy loss on the Prussians. The National Guard of Metz will undertake the defense, if Marshal Bazaine succeed in breaking through the Prussian lines. The siege of Soissons continues. The French have asked a truce to bury their dead. The German losses are said to be trifling.

The occupation of Strasbourg by the Germans was solemnized on the 30th in Berlin. The captures there include 176 guns, worth 2,000,000 of francs, and 8,000,000 francs in the Bank. The King of Prussia has sent 5,000 thalers to the relief of the inhabitants of Strasbourg. The French Government has a proclamation, in which they say, referring to the change in the day fixed for the election, that the early date was decided on with a view to facilitating negotiations for an armistice. They hope the defense of Paris and events outside may bring deliverance before that time. The circulars of M. Jules Favae is said to have been well received in the Departments of France. The Duke of Nassau and his Secretary are reported to have been shot by Francs-tireurs while riding through the country in a carriage. No official confirmation of this report has been received at the Prussian Legation in London. Count von Bismarck formally denies that there is any disposition on the part of Prussia to reduce France to the position of a second-rate Power.

The Great Freshet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Forty-seven lives have been lost by the flood at Harper's Ferry.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad is uninjured by the flood.

The weather this morning is cold, but cloudy.

RICHMOND, Oct. 3.—The flood has gone down, and the merchants are calculating their losses.

It is thought this morning that half a million will cover the loss in the city, but not in the towns above here.

The Legislature will adjourn from day to day until a quorum can be obtained.

AFTON, VA., near Greenwood, Oct. 3. Accounts coming in from this county (Albemarie) represent the destruction of property as immense, and many lives are lost by the flood. In some instances it swept away entire families. The number of lives lost in Albemarle county, as far as heard from, are fourteen.

The amount of destruction of grain, tobacco, barns, fences, cattle, hogs, houses and mills is incalculable. The number of mills and dams destroyed within the range of the flood is about fifty.

The fr[illegible] radius of the upper Valley of Virginia. The flood was so great that it carried cows and hogs before it like so many chips of wood. It was particularly severe along the Chesapeake and Ohio road.

At Phodwell about a mile of track was washed away; some dozen landslides occurred between Cobham and Milboro', and eight or ten bridges were swept away on the road, which is damaged to the extent of $100,000.

At the Mountain Top House, on the summit of the Blue Ridge mountains, the kitchen was flooded with water.

WESTMORELAND.

The undersigned gives notice, that the Westmoreland Plantation, on which he now resides, is for sale.

Westmoreland, is in Pasquotank county, 12 miles from Elizabeth City, near Newbegun Creek. It contains about 825 acres; of which about 125 acres are in wood, conveniently located. The woodland is abundant to supply the Plantation, and there is a lot of Cypress, which will afford building material, for the place for all time to come. The land lies nearly in a square, and is surrounded by four good public roads, which intersect each other, at right angles. There are about 700 acres in cultivation; it is in a high state of improvement, well drained, and produces heavy crops. The whole Plantation, is enclosed with a Juniper and Cypress rail fence, of the best quality, and will require but little repairs, for many years. There are three fields fenced off, each connecting with the Barn Lot, one of 100 acres, one of 60 acres, and one of 50 acres, convenient for small grain, clover or pasturage. The lands produce Corn, Cotton, Wheat, Oats and Peas, in great abundance, and grows Clover, and the grapes most luxurtantly. It is well adapted to all sorts of garden vegetables. There is an abundant supply of fruit for the use of a large family, consisting of the finest Standard Pears, bearing abundantly, from the 15th of July to the 15th of October. Peaches, Cherries, Plums and a lot of dwarf Pears, Peaches, Apricots, Apples and Cherries, set out last fall. A fine lot of Raspberry bushes, from which, there are picked daily, during the season, from 2 to 4 Gallons of berries. A large and thrifty Scuppernong Grape Vine, and Isabella grape vines, bearing luxuriantly, and a fine lot of fig bushes, in full bearing. The buildings are located in a large and beautiful grove of forest trees. The lot is high and pleasant. The main Dwelling House, is a large and elegant building, with 6 rooms, 5 of them with fire places, a large Hall, 12 feet wide, a large pantry and a verandah, on both the North and South sides of the house, all perfectly and elegantly finished. Attached to the main building is a wing 25x30 feet, two stories high, well finished. This building can, very well be used for a separate family. There are two kitchens or cook-houses, two smoke houses, two poultry houses, dairies, and indeed every out-building required for a large family, and sufficient for the accommodation of two or three families.

The farm buildings comprise four tenant houses, each 2 rooms, 3 small barns for tenants use, tool-house, blacksmith shop, a barn, now [illegible] 42x72 feet; and a stock house two stories high, 30x50 feet, the upper story used as a hay loft, with a shed on each side.

There are two wells of water, which are said to be among the best in the country. The barn is ¾ of a mile from the creek, where all the produce is delivered, on vessels. There are four roads leading from the lot to the four main roads, one running North, one East, one South and one West, and each about ¾ of a mile to the main road. Westmoreland has long been acknowledged as one of, if indeed it is not the most valuable plantation, in the county, or in Eastern North Carolina.

Persons wishing to purchase, are invited to come and examine the property, every effort will be made to enable visitors to form a correct opinion. There have been 6 or 8 farms, adjacent to this one, sold to Northern men, within a year past.

My price is $30 per acre. I refer to Dr. P. John; Hon. G. W. Brooks; T. D. Pendleton, Esq., R. F. Overman, Cashr., and Col. W. F. Martin, of Elizabeth City, N. C.

A PROCLAMATION

By his Excellency, the Governor of North Carolina.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT OF N. C.,
RALEIGH, SEPT. 12th, 1870.

Whereas, Official information has been received at this Department that one Rufus Hayes, of Hertford county, is charged with the homicide of one Joseph Parker of said county, on the 4th day of August, 1870;

And Whereas. The said Hayes has escaped or so conseals himself that the process of law cannot be served upon him;

Now, therefore, I, W. W. Holden, Governor of the State of North-Carolina, by virtue of authority vested in me by law, do issue this my Proclamation, offering a reward of TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS for the apprehension and delivery of said criminal to the proper authorities of said county, and I do enjoin all officers of the peace, and each and every good citizen, to aid in securing the ends of justice in this case.

Done at our City of Raleigh, this 12th [L. S] day of September, 1870, and in the ninety fifth year of our Independence.

W. W. HOLDEN, Governor.
By the Governor:
J. B. NEATHERY, Private Secretary.

DESCRIPTION.

Rufus Hayes is about 5 feet 8 or 10 inches high dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, weighs about 150 pounds, one arm a little stiff from having been broken, and there is a scar on the arm that was broken caused from the break, about 22 years old, and is supposed to be in Baltimore, Md., or enlisted on a sea boat in the Navy Yard in Portsmouth, Va. COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

Having associated with me in the general retail Grocery trade, Mr. Oliver C. Horton, (well known to the citizens of this community,) allow me to ask for the new firm, under the style and name of Keaton & Horton the same liberal patronage hertofore extended to me, and also in this notice I take great pleasure in expressing my thanks for the many acts of kindness and liberality which my many friends have shown since my establishment in Elizabeth City, and assure them that every effort will be made by the new firm to please all who may favor them in the purchase of their goods.

B. F. KEATON.
Sept. 22, 1870.

Having become partner with Mr. B. F. Keaton in the retail Grocery Trade, I hope by strict attention to the business and fair dealing, to give entire satisfaction to all that have heretofore been so liberal with their patronage to Mr. Keaton, and I also promise that no pains shall be spared on my part, to render entire satisfaction to my friends and to every one that will favor us with their patronage. Come and give us a trial if you want some good Groceries.

"OUR FATHER'S HOUSE," OR,
THE UNWRITTEN WORD.

By Daniel March, D. D., author of the popular "Night Scenes." This master in thought and language shows us untold riches and beauties in the Great House, with its Blooming flowers, Singing birds, Waving palms, Rolling clouds, Beautiful bow, Sacred mountains, Delightful rivers, Mighty oceans, Thundering voices, Blazing heavens and vast universe with countless beings in millions of world, and reads to us in each the Unwritten Word. Rose-tinted paper, ornate engravings and superb binding. "Rich and varied in thought." "Chaste." "Easy and graceful in style." "Correct, pure and elevating in its tendency." "Beautiful and good." "A household treasure." Commendations like the above from College Presidents and Professors, ministers of all denominations, and the religious and secular press all over the country. Its freshness, purity of language, with clear open type, fine steel engravings, substantial binding, and low price, make it the book for the masses. Agents are selling from 50 to 150 per week.

We want Clergymen, School Teachers, smart young men and ladies to introduce the work for us in every township, and we will pay liberally. No intelligent man or woman need be without a paying business.

NORTH CAROLINIAN.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1870.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisements in this issue
A Valuable Property for Sale.
Court Notices.
Teacher's Wanted.
Desolution of Copartnership.
New York Advertisement.

Local and Personal.

☞ Sickness is abating.

☞ Trade is on the increase.

☞ For Coffee's go to WHITCOMB'S. *

☞ The weather has been delightful during the past few days.

☞ Hon. C. C. POOL is holding Court in Bertie this week.

☞ Wanted—Twenty barrels of Sweet Potatoes by T. T. WHITCOMB. *

☞ The corn-fields in our country promise an abundant yield.

☞ For fine Sugar's go to WHITCOMB'S. *

Our merchants on the "Hillside" seem to be alive to business,

☞ Scuppernong grapes of the finest quality still appear in market.

☞ Hon. C. L. Cobb has returned from Nag's Head. The General is in fine health.

☞ Chinquapins have made their appearance in market.

☞ The Sheriff of this county, Mr. J. L. WOOD, has gone to Raleigh to make his returns.

☞ Still the work of improvement goes gloriously on. A neat fence is being put around the Methodist Church.

☞ Let every one remember that the Fair and Feast comes off on the 17th inst. The ladies say it shall be a success.

☞ LT. FOOTE is in town, ready to transact business with those who may wish to see him.

☞ Those of our Edenton friends wishing Job work, can have it sent them by return Stage.

☞ The Cotton trade is quite brisk. Our friend Brothers' Gin is kept constantly at work.

☞ The Editor will acknowledge the receipt of grapes from Edenton, in next number.

☞ Mr. N. W. TUCKER, of Perquimans, gave us a call a few days ago. He is a live and progrssive faremer.

☞ The best Family Soaps are kept at WHITCOMB'S. *

☞ Everything gives indication of a large mercantile trade this winter. In consequence of which our merchants are in an exuberance of spirits.

☞ Although there has been a great deal of sickness in our community, but few deaths have resulted. The health of this section will compare favorably with that of any in the country.

☞ The Circus and Senator POOL'S "Rocking Gate" seem to divide the attention of visitors to our town this week. The Circus has gone but the Gate still stands an object of wonder and curiosity to everybody.

☞ Kill a mosquito when he is drawing blood and the poison will remain in the blood, but if you wait till he gets enough and retires no pain will follow. The Local has tested this repeatedly, and gives the information for the benefit of the readers of the NORTH CAROLINIAN.

☞ On Monday the 17th of October next, the ladies of the M. E. Church in this place will hold a Fair and Feast for the benefit of the Church. Friends to the Church disposed to contribute in any manner whatever, will please forward all contributions to the address of Mrs. JUDGE BROOKS.

☞ Northern families are still coming South. We are glad to welcome them, but would advise any others proposing to do likewise, to wait a little later in the season. Our section, as every low country, is more or less infested with malaria during the heated term, and it is often injurious to new comers. After frosts there will be not the slightest danger. Every one may then come with perfect safety, and we will say, "welcome! welcome!!"

☞ Dr. THAYER'S Circus which performed in this place on Monday last, was a success, every thing passed off smoothly. It was well attended especially in the evening. The Equestrian performance was, to say the least, good; the Gymnastic and Acrobatic exercises were such as we seldom see equalled. As far as we know, all went away well pleased with the exhibition.

☞ We are frequently asked by our friends and correspondents whether the proposed Rail Road connecting this place and Weldon, will ever be accomplished. Our opinion is clear that such a work can not long be delayed. This section of North Carolina, richly endowed by nature, only wants a proper spirit of improvement on the part of its citizens, to make it one of the most thriving portions of the world. Another good harvest so as to relieve our farmers and merchants of the heavy loads they have been compelled to carry for the past few years, will afford them means to build up their own interests and double the value of real estate. We discover a manifest disposition among the people to take hold of such enterprises—and we confidently predict that it will not be long before Elizabeth City becomes by means of its Rail Roads and telegraph lines and water courses the great commercial City of North Carolina.

☞ The death of Mr. DYER leaves our town without a tailor. A good one might do well here.

☞ Patapsico Flour's for sale at WHITCOMB'S *

☞ It will be seen by reference to our advertiseing columes that twelve colored, and eight white Teachers are wanted immediately, for this County.

☞ A general line of Family Groceries of all descriptions kept on hand at all times, and sold cheap for cash by T. T. WHITCOMB. *

☞ Mr. S. WEISEL is daily receiving his large stock of Fall goods. His new and large advertisement will appear in our next issue.

☞ Any person finding a child's scarlet cloak, will receive a suitable reward on leaving it at the NORTH CAROLINIAN office.

☞ A move in the right direction. Mr. MISKELL'S force is cutting down and hauling off the weeds from the vacant lots.

☞ The interesting meetings being held every night at the African M. E. Church are not void of effect. Many have professed a change of heart.

☞ Inquirer asks—"Who is meant by 'The Wonderful Doctor?'" ROGER BACON a celebrated philosopher and mathematician of the 13th century.

☞ Our friend, Dr. ANDREWS has returned from his Northern trip. He is fully prepared as heretofore to do anything in the Dental line.

☞ Three Hundred sacks of Ground Alum Salt for sale by W. G. BURGESS & Co. Mr. BURGESS left for the North, for a new stock, on Teusday last. *

☞ Capt. ACKERLY has arrived with his two beautiful sea schooners, Tuttle Dayton and Intrepid. He intends making this place his home, and will soon open up a lively West India trade. Success to him.

☞ If any of our town subscribers should fail to get their papers this issue, it will be accounted for by the absence of our regular carrier. We hope soon to see "BILLY" at his post again.

☞ We are gratified to learn that the Temperance order in this place, bearing the name of "Knights of Jericho" is in a flourishing condition. Its membership is large, and the interest increasing.

☞ Thanks to the indefatigable exertions of our efficient officer, Mr. MISKELL, the condition of our streets has been, lately, materially improved. Let the good work continue. Our beautiful, elm-shaded little city should be kept as healthy as possible.

☞ Farmers grow bald sooner than merchants—this is accounted for in the fact that the farmer wear their hats during the day, while the latter do not. The hair confined, becomes heated, the roots are diseased and it falls off. Air your heads.

☞ "TALUS" desires to know who was "the Wizard of the North." It is a name often given to SIR WALTER SCOTT, because of the wonderful charm and descriptive power of his writings. These writings excited an extraordinary enthusiasm when they first appeared.

☞ We learn that the Hon. C. L. COBB has recently received a letter from the Secretary of War stating that a survey of the Roanoke River will soon be made. This will afford opportunity for an appropriation at the next session of Congress, to improve this important avenue of commerce.

We understand a little "side show" not down on the bills came off at the water on Monday. A couple of our visiting friends from an adjoining county, supposing no doubt that the time between the performances was too tedious, indulged in some athletic exhibitions resulting in a black eye, bloody face and dirty-clothes, plus seven dollars and a half each paid to the Mayor as fine and costs.

☞ Our Devil requests us to say to the patrons of the NORTH CAROLINIAN, that if they discover anything unusually sprightly, lively and interesting in this issue, they can attribute it to the absence of Dr. JOHN from the editorial sanctum. As the imp made this sage suggestion and was about to leave our room with a handful of copy, he endeavored to do a little trick performed by one of the gymnasts at the circus last night—turn two summersaults without touching—which feat he accomplished, very much as the clown did by falling on his b-b-breakfast.

☞ Young man, stop loafing about the corners of our streets, and lounging about the bar-room doors. Shame on you! Have you no aims—no aspirations? Go to work. There ought to be a work-house established here, and you confined in it. Where is your manhood—your pride—your independence of character? Where will all this end? Your parents will not live always—who will take care of you after they shall have passed away. O it is a sad spectacle, that of man spending the golden time of his life in idleness and dissoluteness. Again we say—go to work, work on the streets—on a farm—do anything, except loaf.

One of the most touching anecdotes of the horrible war now desolating France is that of a Sister of Charity at Reischsoffen, she following in the rear of the retreating French forces. All at once she heard a cry—that of a solder just shot and writhing on the ground. Running to him, she ministered as circumstances allowed, and was about making the sign of the cross on his brow when a cannon ball struck her and carried off both her legs. She fell dying upon the body of the wounded soldier. Surely there is a sort of heroism about this which so elevates our nature as to make us almost forget the crime which gave it opportunity of display.

Forty young men and women at a board-ing-house in St. Louis were recently poisoned with arsenic that had been mixed for rats. By the prompt use of stomach-pumps, the lives of all were spared, although some of them have not yet recovered from the shock.

A singular fatality occurred in England, recently. A fly, after having been upon poisoned fly paper, alighted upon a lady's nose, upon a spot where there had been a slight scratch, leaving a fresh open wound. The wound almost immediately became inflamed, and in a short time the whole system was affected, and the lady died in twenty-four hours.

Illinois was admitted into the Union Dec. 23, 1818. At the next census—that of 1820—the total population of the State was 55,162. Cook County, in which Chicago is located, was at that time principally inhabited by Indians, frogs and mosquitoes. The present census will undoubtedly give the State a population of 2,500,000.

James M. Davis, formerly Private Secretary to Secretary Chase, and subsequently holding the same position to Secretary McCulloch, died at Washington, D. C., in one of the city hospitals. He was once a young man of fine promise, having risen from the position of messenger in the Treasury Department, but latterly became a victim to intemperance, and died from an attack of mania potu.

John W. Eorney, Jr., son of the editor ly the Philadelphia Press, has mysteriously disappeared in that City, and it is feared he has been foully dealt with, as he has always been in the habit of carrying plenty of money. He came to town last week to send a dispatch about Nilson's reception. He has not been seen since the morning of the 22d inst., although the Police have made diligent inquiries for him.

A barrel of flour weighs 196 pounds, a barrel of pork 200 pounds, a barrel of rice 600 pounds, a keg of powder 25 pounds, a firkin of butter 55 pounds, a tub of butter 84 pounds. The following are sold by weight per bushel: Wheat, beans and clover seed, 60 pounds: corn, rye and flaxseed, 55 pounds; buck-wheat, 52 pounds; barley, 48 pounds; coarse salt, 85 pounds.

A cotton factory of Augusta, Ga., has just published its annual report. The capital stock of the company is $600,000; consumption of cotton during year, 2,907,875 pounds; cloth manufactured, 8,222,181 yards; hand employed, 489; to whom $157,976 were paid in wages; net earnings, $126,779: from which four dividends of five per cent, each were paid, and $779 added to the surplus fund.

WHAT DOES REASON SAY?—The little mongoose when bitten by a deadly serpent resorts to a certain plant, eats of it, and escapes the effect of the poison. That is instinct. Human beings on the other hand, must depend on reason and experience in selecting the means of protecting health and life against unwholesome influences. Now, what does reason say on this vital subject? Does it not tell us that to invigorate and purify the system is the best way to protect it against the invisible poison which generates disease? Surely it does. The next question is, what guide shall we follow in choosing a medicinal safeguard? Reason replies let your monitor be experience. Well, the experience of eighteen years comprised in one unbroken series of satisfactory testimonials assures us that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters possess strengthening, regulating and antiseptic properties which are not combined in the same happy proportions in any other preparation extant. This therefore is the antidote to which reason bids us resort when our health is imperiled either by the malaria which preduces epidemic disorders, or by any other cause, whether inherent and constitutional or connected with our habits, occupations and pursuits.

The venom of a noxious reptile is scarcely more subtile and dangerous than that which lurks in foul air and impure water. To escape the fevers, billious disorders, disturbances of the bowels, and other serious maladies produced by these insalubrious elements, it is absolutely necessary that the stomach and all the secretive organs should be, so to speak, in a robust condition. Upon the amount of resistance which the vital system can oppose to the deleterious influences that assail it, the safety of the health depends, and it is because the GREAT VEGETABLE INVIGORANT imparts energy and regularity to the most important functions of the body, that it can be recommended and guaranteed as an invaluable preventive medicine.

MEDICAL.

SICKNESS, PAIN AND DEATH.

Legitimately result as penalties for violations of natural laws, from which none escape.

The faded cheek, the pale and wan features, the dull eye, the clouded intellect, the deep heaving sigh, the feeble and emaciated frame, the dejected brow, the tottering gate, all indicate previous transgression of law. Knowing that "procrastination is the thief of time," all intelligent beings apply for some remedy as soon as circumstances permit; while those who do not act upon the principle that "delays are dangerous," generally linger, lose more time and pay more money.

Thousands of mothers and daughters, in all stations and conditions of life, are suffering, lingering and dying from the effects of some dreaded and dreadful

FEMALE COMPLAINT,

That claims its victims throughout the length and breadth of our land.

Many females suffer in some way at each monthly period; some girls are in great peril at the commencement of menstruation, while older ones dread its decline at the "turn of life." Sometimes the menstrual flow is too much, or too little, or may be attended with pain; may be irregular or entirely checked, or changed in appearance, attended with other distressing sympeoms. Leucorrhœa, or the "Whites," frequently drains the system, or ulceration of the womb may create pain and cause rapid prostration.

Falling of the womb is an exceedingly common complaint, giving much trouble and distress, which, under ordinary treatment, is difficult to cure.

Hysterics, Green Sickness, Irritability of the Womb, and other serious and fatal complaints follow the female sex throughout life. Lives there a medical gentleman who has or can relieve the fair sex of the above troubles? Not many. Is there no combination remedial agents that will come to her rescue? We answer, Yes.

ENGLISH FEMALE BITTERS,

The only acknowledged Uterine Tonic and Female Regulator known, will cure all complaints above mentioned in an incredibly short time. The Bitters at once arouses, strengthens and restores the womb to its natural condition, removing obstructions, relieving pain and regulating the monthly period. Yonder stands a pale, feeble and languid girl, just bursting into womanhood; she is the pride of all, but hark! she silently steals a pickle, eats chalk, or a slate pencil; no appetite for food; she turns with a dull eye and seeks solitude; her eye no longer sparkles; her merry laugh is no longer heard ringing through the air; she mopes about with bloodless lips and gums, with headache, palpitation, constipation, swimming of the head, cold feet and hands, melancholy; she has a coated tongue, offensive breath, and a host of other evils too numerous to mention.

When neglected all these symptoms become aggravated, there is sick stomach, heartburn, a dark line settles under the eyes, the legs and ankles are swollen, the hair loses its gloss and falls off, there is brittleness and splitting of the finger-nails, swollen abdemen, extreme nervousness, fretfulness, pains and aches, dry cough, Hysterical Fits, rapid prostration, epilepsy and death! If you, or any of your friends, are thus afflicted, send at once for a Bottle of English Female Bitters and be cured. Its effects are magical in such complaints. Surely no mother will postpone and delay this duty until

DEATH IS AT THE DOOR.

In all these complaints the system evidently shows a want of red blood, and Mr. Churchill, in his work on Diseases of Females, says: "Bearing in mind that the blood is remarkably deficient in red corpuscles, and the known property of iron to correct this condition, theory suggests it as the most to be relied on, the best of which is the Citrate." Citrate of Iron enters largely into the composition of English Female Bitters, combined with powerful vegetable tonics of rare qualities.

Among the mountains of Tennessee and the piney woods of Mississippi, is found a certain hard and flinty root, which has been in secret use by some old midwives for many years, possessing magic powers in regulating and restoring all females suffering with any affection of the womb. This root we have obtained, gave it a fair test in our practice and it is now one of the principle ingredients in these Bitters. Other powerful uterine and general tonics also enter into its composition. We also add Leptandra or Black root, sufficient to act upon the liver and keep the bowels open.

BLOOMING YOUNG GIRLS,

Middle-aged matrons, those at the critical period, and the aged grandmother, are all cured by the use of our English Female Bitters, now prescribed and used by physicians all over the country.

If you are troubled with Falling of the Womb, attended with a sense of weight and bearing down pain in the back and side, and other attendant evils, English Female Bitters will give entire relief.

Those at the "turn of life," mothers after confinement, and all others (male or female) who are convalescents from any protracted or debilitating complaint, who gain strength slowly, and whose digestion is slow and imperfect, will find these Bitters the very thing their system demands. It gives a powerful appetite, aids and assists digestion, arouses the liver, strengthens mentally and physically, and fills the whole system with pure crimson blood coursing through its channels.

COMMON GROG-SHOP BITTERS.

Empty Bitter Bottles, of various styles, can be found around almost every dwelling and cabin throughout the land: Their taste is pleasant, and are advertised to cure almost every disease, while the manufacturers know they possess no medicinal properties whatever. They are so many disguises for exceedingly common beverages which do not, nor cannot possibly cure any one.

Beware of these pleasant bitters in quart bottles, they contain a sting for your vitals, and he who buys them carries a "toper's" grog into his house. One man who knows nothing about medicina, says his big bottles of common stuff will cure chills and fever, rheumatism and consumption; another, whose bottle is very fancy, cures all impurities of the blood, makes old men young, casts out devils, restores sight to the blind, and numerous other miracles; while yet another, who presumes every man a drunkard, proposes to cure colic, ingrowing nails, yellow fever, heart disease and love-sick maidens!! We know they make no such cures, we know the people at large are deceived and swindled, and as we desire to ventilate these common humbugs, make the following challenge to one and all:

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS

That one tablespoonful of ENGLISH FEMALE Bitters contains as much medicinal properties as one bottle of any of the pleasantly tasted common advertised bitters of the day! The medical profession to decide the question. Be it understood that English Female Bitters is not a beverage, but it is a powerful Iron and Vegetable Tonic combined, curing long standing chronic female complaints in every direction.

Put up in large bottles at $1.50 per bottle, or six bottles for $8.00, and sold by druggists and merchants everywhere.

A VALUABLE FARM AND FISHERY FOR SALE.

This farm is in Perquimans county, N. C., immediately on Albemarle Sound, where the water is 20 miles wide, and 18 feet deep, and is on a neck of high, rolling land, between two navigable Rivers, and requires but little draining. This farm is about 18 miles from the town of Elizabeth City, N. C., and is among the finest plantations in the State. It produces corn, wheat, cotton, &c., in large quantities—the land being very rich. The farm buildings consist of large barn, stables, and other convenient out houses, small dwelling, &c., within 300 yards of the water, and the fishery. There are 400 acres of land 250 of which are cleared, and in good cultivation, the balance in fine wood and timber.

This farm has upon it one of the best and largest fisheries in North Carolina and has been in successful operation for the past two seasons. It has a new seine 2,500 yards long, and all the necessary boats and apparatus for carrying on a first class shad and herring fishery, barrels, stands, fish houses, servants quarters, offices, &c., all new. In a fair fishing season it would be safe to calculate on catching 2,000,000 of herring and 50,000 shad, besides large, numbers of other fish, such as rock, sturgeon, mullets, &c. The gross proceeds from such a fishery, it is fair to calculate, will in one season, say from March 10th to May 15, amount to $25.000 and the expense all told, would not be more than $7,000 thus leaving a clear profit from the fishery alone, of $18,000 in one season. The offal from this fishery is a manure of more value than guano. Enough is saved every season to make over 100 acres rich. And in a few years, the whole farm can be made as rich as the garden farms near the large cities, and with no other expense than simply hauling and spreading on the land. There is a large heap of this manure now on the premises, left over from last year. The purchaser gets this.

In addition to the advantages and inducements already mentioned, the farm, is on a pleasant, loyal neighborhood, in the midst of good society, and has all the surroundings requisite, to make Northern settlers contented and prosperous.

Situated as this farm is on the wide waters, it is fanned in Summer by sea breezes, rendering it all times in warm weather pleasant and healthful. And in winter, the waters moderate the cold, and made the atmosphere mild and salubrious.

At all seasons of the year, fish, fresh from water, of the choicest kinds, can be had in abundance for the table, with but little effort or expense. And in winter, the waters abound in wild fowel, such as ducks, geese and swans, which to the sportsmen affords amusement, and to the epicure, the enjoyment which he so much courts.

This whole property, including farm, fishing tackle, seine, boats, barrels and every thing in complete order, is offered at the low price of $20,000, $8,000 cash, balance in one, two and three years, with interest from January 1, 1871. This property is a great inducement offered to the public. For further particulars, apply to

GEO. D. POOL,
Agent.

TO LUMBERMEN.—

The dissolution of Copartnership of the undersigned Firm will take effect from the 1st day of November next. We will offer our entire mill property with fifteen acres of land and good building on the Chowan River, at public sale on the 24th day of October next consisting of one Steam Circular Saw Mill in fine working order, with two twenty two horse power Engines, two sets of Corn runners, with necessary Tools, Cars and Team for logging and running the same. Also two fine Engines twenty-five and eighty horse power, with three sets of French Bur stones and sufficient machinery for another mill. Parties wishing to purchase would do well to examine before the day of sale. Terms liberal.

AGRICULTURAL, HORTICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC MATTERS.

Farm Economy.

A few months ago I saw the question in your paper, Why should the animal products of a farm equal its vegetable products? As no one has furnished an answer, I send you a few thoughts upon the subject. The most profitable farming in the end, is that which keeps the soil in the most productive state. This needs nourishment to sustain it, as well as the animal system. When in its native state the amount of vegatable matter that decays upon it, annually compensates for the fertilizing properties abstracted in its growth, and thus an even balance is preserved in nature. But by removing the products of the soil from year to year, without some compensation in return, we remove so much of its vitality, if so I may speak. This balance is destroyed. We subtract from its ability to produce, and the consequence is, it soon becomes exhausted of fertility. I speak of ordinary soils. There is places in our country where the soil will produce from year to year without any apparent exhaustion. But this is not true of a large portion of it. The soil, by being compelled to employ her strength for the production of annual crops, without any renovation of it, like the ill-fed and over worked beast, soon fails. Compensation must in some way be made for what is thus taken from the farm. The soil must be fed, to keep it in a healthful condition, as well as the tillers of it.

The question then arises, How shall this be the most efficiently. and the most easily effected? In what way can a sufficient quantity of manure be obtained, to keep the land in a proper state of productiveness? It is believed that this can be accomplished in no way so surely as by having the animal and vegetable products of the farm suitably proportioned to each other. With proper care, a farmer may, in this way, make a great amount of manure, and an article too, that is much more reliable, than that obtained from any other source. If he procures it from a stable in a city or village, he usually gets an article that is firefanged, and much poorer than he can manufacture on his own premises. If he purchase concentrated manures, he is liable to be duped, and humbugged, and cheated out of his money, and thus left to future disappointment. But the intelligent, thinking farmer, knows what dependence can be placed ordinarily on that which he produces himself, and can make calculations accordingly.

In a wheat growing country, the straw and chaff may be left on the ground. But this, in its native state is comparatively valuless. It adds but little to the fertility of the soil. But by being cut, and mixed with meal, and then passed through the bowels of an annimal, its value is greatly increased. I consider the animal stomach a better laboratory for the manufacture of manure, than those from which issue the so-called superphosphates of lime. By keeping animals on a farm, a vast amount of refuse matter, which in its native state is of little value, may be made of great utility. Straw, if not wanted for feed, may be used to litter stables and yards, and thus not only be made conducive to the comfort of the stock, but become an absorbent of liquid manure, which is by far the most valuable part of that produced by animals. Muck, forest leaves, potato tops, refuse cornstalks, and the like, may also in this way be turned to good account, in keeping the soil in a healthful and productive state.

The pig-sty is also a laboratory for the manufacture of manure, of the value of which many of our farmers seem but little aware. The small number of hogs necessary to be kept for family use, may, if rightly managed, be made to pay in part for their keeping, by their labor. Swine are excellent composters, if you will furnish the materials for this. Give them plenty of refuse straw, chip manure, decayed vegatable matter, turf from the road-side or corners of the fences, the reeds and decayed vegatable tops from the garden, and other refuse matter which may easily be collected in moments of leisure, and at the end of the season you need not send to the city for the patent humbugs called fertilizers. You will have a mine of wealth on your own premises, that will render your soil productive.

Farmers who live at a distance from market, may consume an amount of vegetable products, in fattening animals, or in feeding the cows in the dairy, or the young stock on the farm, which would otherwise be lost. In this way, with the aid of a little labor, much may be turned into cash, tnat otherwise would be employed in some barter trade, or wasted. A mixed husbandry may thus be made productive of more gain than any one single branch. The several departments act as aids to each other. They seem dependent—each being neessary to keep up the fertility of the soil, and to yield the greatest income. Without the aid of the manure produced by animals, the farmer may plow and hoe to but little purpose. The soil by being constantly robbed of its strength, refuses to yield its increase, and cultivation of it must soon be abandoned. Mixed husbandry also affords variety of employmant, and employment for all seasons of the year, In the winter months when the frost and snow claim possession of the soil, the farmer may be busy in caring for his stock, in collecting materials for manure, and preparing it for future use, Thus he will be constantly kept in a healthful activity. He will find employment for both mind and body, which will act reciprocally on each other, to preserve an even balance between them. Monotony soon tires, but variety gives zest to the spirits, and thus contributes to health and prosperity.

Ignorance in planting Trees.

The Aberdeen (Miss.) Examiner, in its notes on fruit culture in Mississippi, speaks as follows of the death of trees by starvation or wrong planting:

"In planting trees, the custom has been almost universal—and sanctioned, too, by the highest authority—to, first, dig deep holes down into the stiff clay, or barren sand subsoil, as the case may be, and then fill in with soil that has been highly manured—sometimes with manure alone, and covered with soil—and then plant the tree in this highly enriched and thoroughly prepared soil, while the surrounding soil beyond the limits of these holes is left unmanured and uncultivated. Now what is the consequence? If the subsoil be a stiff clay, the hole becomes a recepticable for water, which stands and stagnates at the bottom. The roots, at first, stimulated and nurtured by the rich soil, put forth fibres rapidly, and the tree starts into a sudden and rapid growth. But, as the roots descend, they soon come in contact with the stagnant water, which operates as a deadly poison to the roots. This is communicated to the tree which soon sickens and dies. Nothing can be more certain than this result, Its growth suddenly stops, the leaves turn yellow, the tree drags out a sickly existence for a few years, and then dies from starvation."

The New Jersey State prison contains 575 prisoners, including, 26 females. Three hundred and seventy are engaged in the manufacture of shoes, turning out daily, 2,000 pairs.

How to Put Saws in Order.

A saw is an edged tool. The edges of the teeth cut with a crushing stroke. For this reason, the very points should be brought to a fine edge by means of a fine file and a fine-gritted whetstone. When the points of teeth have been filed sharp, on soft swas, the edge will be coarse and wiry. No saw will cut satisfactorily, when there is such a rough and coarse edge on the teeth. When a saw that has a good temper, is put in proper order, it will cut off a hard log with a very limited amount of power.

The philosophy of putting any kind of a saw in order, consists in having the very points of all the teeth range as perfectly as may be practicable. When one tooth is only a trifle longer than two or three on either side of it, too much is required of that tooth. When ten men of unequal stature are required to carry a stick of timber on their shoulders, the taller ones must bear all the burden, while the short men carry nothing. This illustrates the case precisely, in regard to saw-teeth of unequal lengths. The long teeth are required do to all the sawing; and the short ones cut none at all.

When a few teeth are so much longer than those on each side of them, the points take such a rank hold of the wood that the saw jumps, and the teeth do not cut true kerf. This requires more power to work the saw; and the teeth will not cut so smoothly, so easily, nor so fast, as if all the points were of a uniform, length, and all were standing in rows, as straight as a mathematical line. When the teeth of a good saw are properly set, and correctly filed and whetted, a saw will run throught a board like a warm knife through cold butter.

To put a saw in order, secure the blade in the saw-clamps; joint the points true with a flat file; then file the points to a sharp edge. And always file where there is sufficient light to enable you to see the points distinctly. Be exceedingly careful to stop filing as soon as the tooth is filed to a perfect point. One thrust with the file after the tooth has been brought to a perfect edge, will shorten it, and put the saw out of order, just in proportion as the point is filed off. Let the points be set uniformly, and only a little. Go over the teeth with an old file, to give them a more perfect edge. Then, lay the blade flatly on a smooth board, and pass a fine gritted whetstone along the sides of the points to remove the wiry edge and to give the teeth as fine a cutting edge as practicable. A good saw, when in prime order, is one of the most effective tools in use.—Sereno Edwards Todd, in Hearth and Home.

Seed Peanuts.

The large amount of inferior peanuts going now into market, and the diseased condition of the germs of the nuts with an apparently fair, bright hull, renders a word of caution here particularly apropos to those who have slight experience in planting and growing the crop. On splitting open the peas you will find on the little leaflets of the germ at the pointed end of the kernel a brownish tinge, and often grayish spots on the thin, pale pink skin; later in the saason you will find all spotted, mildewed, or inferior peas, become deep red or pink, all such should be rejected for seed. There is no crop on which success depends so much in the character of the seed as this capricious one of the pindars. The drought caused the first nuts formed in many soils to decay and induced disease in others, and this has been particularly observable on lands admirably adapted to growing the crop, and is most often found on lands where the fertilizers, guano, lime and the phosphates were used. Such lands have produced large crops of vines; pops and saps, water to convey food was wanting for development, heat induced disease, death and decay in the nuts first formed, and unhealthy, so far as germs are concerned, is general in the crop formed subsequent to the last rains. The query in the peanut growing district is universal, where shall we procure good seed?

Good seed should be of pale pink, uniform in color, bright lobes on opening the kernels, germ and leaflets without tinge of brown, and should be kept in sacks suspended in airy barn lofts, dry and cool, all winter. The writer of this has "no axe to grind," and will probably be a seed buyer, although several hundred bushels were grown on his lands the present season.—Planter and Farmer.

About Milking.

Five per cent and perhaps ten can be added to the amount of milk obtained from the cows of this country, if the following rules are inexorably followed:

1st. Never hurry cows, in driving to and from the pasture.

2d. Milk as near at equl intervals as possible. Half past five in the morning and six at night are good hours.

3d. Be especially tender to the cow at milking-time.

4th. When seated, draw the milk as rapidly as possible being certain to always get it all.

5th. Never think or talk of anything besides what you are doing while milking.

6th. Offer some caress and always a soothing word when you approach a cow and when you leave her. The better she loves you the more free and complets will be her abandon as you sit by her side.

We append the not uncommon practice:

1st. Let some boy tutrn the cows away, and get them, who is fond of throwing stones and switching the hind ones every chance he gets.

2d. Milk early in the Morning and late at night, dividing the day into two portions, one of fifteen hours and the other of nine.

3d. Whack the cow over the back with the stool, or speak sharply to her if she does not "so" or "hoist."

4th. Milk slow and carelessly, and stop at the first slacking of the fluid,

5th. Talk and laugh, and perhaps squirt milk at companion milkers, when seated at the cow.

6th. Heep the animal in a tremble all the time you are milking, and when done give her a vigorous kick.

Abraham Brand, of Deleware Station, N. J., has been recently convinced that it does pay to use plaster. He says: One of my farmers planted corn in a field, forty rows of which nearest the building I planted myself. The night before I planted I put the seed to soak in warm water and rolled it in plaster while planting. I rememher of getting an ear last March, near Newark, of a friend. I planted the ear dry without plaster, planting directly across the forty rows, and where the ground was as good as any. This morning I called the attention of the farmer to it. There had been no plaster put upon any since planting, and we decided that there was almost half difference, that which was rolled almost twice as large, of a good healthy color, the other having a sickly yellow shade. The soil is a heavy clay loam.

A young lady contemplating matrimony was one morning handed a Testament by her father, with a leaf turned down at the following passage; "He who giveth in marriage doeth well, but he who giveth not in marriage doeth better." The immediately returned it with the following reply written underneath: "I am content to do well; let those do better who can."

TO PHYSICIANS

NEW YORK, May 5th, 1870.

Allow me to call your attention to my

PREPARATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU.

The component parts are, BUCHU, LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MODE OF PREPARATION.—Buchu, in vacuo. Juniper Berries, by distilation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now in use.

Buchu, as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle), leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of the ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection, it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopœa, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflamation exist. In this, you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation,

With a feeling of confidence,
I am, very respectfully,
H. T. HELMBOLD,
Chemist and Druggist, of 16 Years' Experience.

(FROM THE LARGEST MANUFACTURING CHEMISTS IN THE WORLD.)

NOVEMBER 1, 1854.

"I am acquainted with Mr. H. T. HELMBOLD; he occupied the Drug Store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise."

WILLIAM WEIGHTMAN,
Firm of Powers & Weightman,

Ninth and Brown streets, Philadelphia.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU,

Is the great specific for Universal Lassitude, Prostration, &c.

The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or insanity ensues.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU.

In affections peculiar to Females, is unequalled by any other preparation, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus State of the Uterus, and all complaints incident to the sex, or the decline or change of life.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH

Will radically exterminate from the system diseases arising from habits of dissipation, at little expense, little or no change in diet, no inconvenience or exposure; completely superceding those unpleasant and dangerous remedies, Copaiva and Mercury, in all these diseases.

USE HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU.

In all diseases of these organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. It is pleasant in taste and odor, "immediate" in action, and more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron.

Those suffering from broken-down or delicate constitutions, procure the remedy at once.

The reader must be aware that, however slight may be the attack of the above diseases, it is certain to affect the bodily health and mental powers.

All the above diseases require the aid of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU is the great Diuretic.

Sold by Druggists everywhere. PRICE—$1.25 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe symptoms in all communications.

The Great Medical Discovery!
Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS,
Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
WHAT ARE THEY?

For Female Complaints, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal; are safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and of all the Visceral Organs.

THEY ARE NOT A VILE
FANCY DRINK,

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits, and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics" "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and a LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter, and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, providing the bones are not destroyed by mineral poisons or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They invigorate the stomach, and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Copious Discharges of Urine, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms which are the offsprings of Dyspepsia, are cured by these Bitters.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE, and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed.

For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French, and Spanish.

PROFESSIONAL.—

I take this method of informing my patrons, friends and citizens of Elizabeth City and Pasquotank county, also those of Camden Currituck and Perquimans counties, that I can now be found at all hours, when not Professionally absent, either at my residence, next door to Samuel Cartwright's store, or my office next door to C. C. Allen & Bro., Road street. All calls for service or cases intrusted to my care will receive strict punctuality, and I require prompt settlements of all persons employing me. I shall keep constantly on hand a supply of Standard Medicines, and such persons as prefer it can get prescriptions and medicines at my office. All office practice must be cashed at the time of service. I wish all orders for services left either at my residence or on a slate in my office.
